La fin de l'économie

Genre : pop, experimental

Duration of live set : 1:20

Note by Aquaserge

This summer, in the midst of the multitude of information circulating on the web, a video with Marguerite Duras ("Comme l'histoire du futur", 1986) particularly struck us.

Here is an excerpt: "[...] We would say to them that we discovered fires, blazes, fusions that Man had lit and that He was unable to stop....".

We derived the lyrics of a song called "fire" from this video, and will pursue on this path, getting inspired by what we encounter, as in a game of mirrors with temporal reminiscences. These moments when the past converges with the present, sometimes called "tiger leaps into the past" (Walter Benjamin).

The artistic gesture revolves around recovering / revealing / diverting / quoting. For this show, we follow the trail of a type of "ecological music" where beings can be singularly alive and walk a path among haunted worlds of dazzling and contradictory images, where recorded sound and the sound archive are the foundations of music. Through this project, we want to create a dialogue between paradoxical visions of the world. We seek to produce a full and ample sound, drawing on our influences from American underground music, combining electric rock, electronic and classical or acoustic instruments.

The show will be like a symphonic poem, a one-movement piece inspired by a non-musical subject (literary, philosophical, historical, poetic, pictorial). Elise Simonet will supervise the dramaturgy by staging texts, songs, gestures.
